

English: Monday 18th May

Read "The day the metals marched" by John Agard.

Some tricky words have been defined for you- highlight these and find some synonyms. (Remember a synonym is a word that means the same thing)

The Day The Metals Marched

Out of the earth's crust they come,
Out of the furnace they come after centuries of combustion.
From every direction they come and they need no drum –
these molten messengers marching, marching to the sound of their own names:

Aurum
Argentum
Cuprum
Ferrum
Staunum

All taking up position.
All ready to stand as one,
despite their different forms of lumps, blades, jewels, wires, rods.
All in blinding splendour.
Iron and Bronze rubbing shoulders.
Gold and Silver mingling rays.
Copper glinting next to Tin –

And on the day the metals marched Plumbum just couldn't wait to join in.
Yes, old Plumbum, better known as Lead,
though grey of hair and slow of foot,
fell in line with –

Aurum
Argentum
Cuprum
Ferrum
Staunum

Meanwhile, the humans stayed indoors.

Word:	Definition:
Furnace	a heater, boiler.
Centuries	Hundreds of years.
Combustion	Burning something.
Molten	Melted into a liquid.
Splendour	Magnificent to look at.
Aurum Argentum Cuprum Ferrum Staunum	Names of the messengers.