In the Knox family there were eight daughters. Sissy Knox, at age fifteen, bossed them all around. She thought she knew everything! In fact, Sissy did know some things. She taught her younger sisters how to play right. Then came the triples – Peggy, Meggy and Bessy. Peggy dressed like Meggy. Meggy dressed like Bessy. Bessy dressed like Peggy. Not even dad knew which was which! Child number five was Daren. Daren liked baking. She made muffins for the family. She kneaded and patted each morning. Then she baked and baked. Good smells filled the air. At night, the Knox family ate fresh muffins for dinner. Myra, the sixth daughter played drums. Neighbours held their heads every hour that Myra played. She knew how to keep a beat.
