Topic: PSHE

If you had this £5, would you buy a small toy with it? Or would you save it and buy a big toy when you have a bit more money?

Think about these questions with someone at home:

What is money?

Where does money come from?

How do we use money?

How does money benefit (help) us?

What would the world be like if people didn't have money?

Do you think people have always had money?

What do we mean by spending and saving?

We all have choices about how we spend our money. There will be times when we spend all that we have and other times when we save up for something bigger. Has anyone at home had to save for something big?

Read the story or ask an adult to read with you on the next page. Think about these questions below:

1. Why did Harold decide to save his money to buy the guinea pigs instead of just getting a smaller present on his birthday?
2. Would he have found it easy or hard to save up for weeks? Why?
3. How do you think Harold felt in the weeks that he was saving up?
4. How do you think Harold felt when he had enough money to buy the guinea pig and equipment?

Harold saves for something special

'Harold,' said Harold's mum, 'It's your birthday coming up next month. Have you thought what you would like to ask for as a present?'

'Oh yes,' said Harold, 'There's only one thing that I want and that's a guinea pig.'

'Oh Harold, I'm afraid that's going to cost too much,' said his mum.

'Really?' cried Harold, 'They don't cost much. My friend Derek told me.'

'No, it doesn't cost much to buy the guinea pig,' explained his mum, 'but it's everything else you'll need to buy to look after it.'

So Harold's mum explained to Harold all the other equipment and things that Harold would need to look after his guinea pig. 'And there are other things to think about like vet fees if your guinea pig is ill. Have you thought about that?'

Harold hadn't and he looked very disappointed. 'Don't worry,' his mum said, 'Let's work out how much all that would cost,' and they sat down and wrote it all down.

Mum looked up prices on the internet and finally they had a total cost but it was much more than his mum and dad could afford, even if he added in the money from his money box.

'Why don't we wait and see if you get any other money for your birthday. You usually do. You could save it all up and buy everything you need,' said Harold's mum.

So Harold waited for his birthday and sure enough he did get some money from other people in his family. Even Kiki and Derek gave him some money instead of a present like they usually did.

When everyone had gone home from his birthday party Harold sat down with his mum and dad and they counted all the money he had received and added in the money he had saved in his money box. He nearly had enough money for all the things he wanted but was still twenty pounds short.

Friday 5th June

'I know,' said Harold's dad, 'You could do some jobs around the house and we could pay you each time you do one.' If you work hard you should be able to save that extra twenty pounds in no time.'

Harold loved the idea and for the next three weeks he did as many extra jobs as he could. He helped wash and clean the car; did some weeding in the garden; was responsible for emptying the kitchen bins and sorting out the recycling items; and lots of other jobs that he normally didn't do. He didn't get any money for tidying his bedroom as he was expected to do that anyway!

At the end of the three weeks Harold and his mum and dad counted all the money again and this time he had just enough to buy a guinea pig and all the extra equipment that was needed to keep it.

So that weekend they went to the pet shop and picked out a lovely little baby guinea pig which Harold decided on the spot was going to be called 'Piglet'. And then Harold's parents surprised him by saying that because he had been so good at saving his money and working hard at all his extra jobs they were going to buy another guinea pig to keep Piglet Company.

Harold was overjoyed and saw another brown and white guinea pig in the shop that he knew would be the perfect friend for Piglet. He decided to call her Jigsaw, because of the pattern on her fur.

'Thank you, mum and dad,' he said, and as they went out of the shop Harold had a huge smile on his face.
